HOT WATER

BY MARGARET WANG

"We will work on regaining your focus," Master Wu said to Nya. He poured some tea and bid her to come sit with him. He didn't ask her any questions. They just sat there silently, sipping tea.

At first, Nya thought, Oh thank goodness Master Wu isn't making me talk. Then she thought, Why isn't he making me talk? My powers have been out of control ever since we met Miss Demeanor – a new criminal stealing truckloads of Vengestone. The more she thought, the more flustered she got. Suddenly, she heard the sound of water spraying and the other ninja calling from inside.

"Shut off the sprinklers!" Cole shouted.

"Another pipe burst in the kitchen!" Kai yelled.

Master Wu took his last sip of tea and then said, "Nya, you need to leave."

Nya broke her silence. "Master, I'm sure I can control my powers. Please don't ask me to leave the monastery."

"Nya, I'm asking you to leave . . . to get more tea," Master Wu said calmly.

Walking to the tea shop was the hardest walk. Every fountain, every water bottle in a person's hand made Nya nervous. The ninja stepped into an alley for a breather when she heard a familiar voice.

"Well, if it isn't Miss Water Tornado!" Miss Demeanour said. She shot flames toward Nya, but the ninja easily dodged them.

"Let's turn up the heat!" Miss Demeanor said, shooting bigger flames. This time, Nya summoned her power and was about to send fistfuls of water at the enemy, when the water made a U-turn and drenched Nya instead.

Miss Demeanor laughed as her henchmen arrived with a getaway car. "You're all wet, Elemental Master."

"Um, that's not really insulting, because I AM the Master of Water," Nya said.

"Well, I'm the master of trash talk, and I'm going to fill my mouth with trash. I mean garbage. I mean . . . let's get out of here!" Miss Demeanor shouted at her henchmen.

Back at the monastery, Nya began to train even harder. She relaxed her thoughts and focused her mind on her power. Nya's uncontrolled bursts of water happened less often now, and her confidence and trust in herself grew.

Meanwhile, at her secret lair, Miss Demeanor tried writing better punchlines. She practiced them in the mirror, adding bursts of flames for dramatic effect.

They would both be ready for their next encounter.

"Hey boss!" one of Miss Demeanor's henchmen called. "Why are we getting so many orders for Vengestone?"

"We don't get paid to ask questions," she said, shooting a short flame at him. "But take your time."

"Take my time?" The masked henchman repeated. "Wow. Thanks, boss!"

Miss Demeanor seemed to be looking for something, or someone, and she smiled when they appeared.

The ninja kicked in the door and Nya stood facing her.

"Now I've definitely made it to the top," Miss Demeanor said aloud. "I'm a ninja's personal nemesis!"

"What does 'nemesis' mean, boss?" one of the henchmen asked.

"Your lines are no good if your crowd doesn't understand them," Nya quipped.

Angry, Miss Demeanor shot flames at Nya. "If you can't take the heat, Water Ninja, then get out."

Nya remained calm. "That line was much better. I can see you've been practicing."

"Thanks for noticing," Miss Demeanor blushed before remembering who she was talking to.

"Are they fighting with words?" Kai asked his fellow ninja. Lloyd shrugged.

"I have a burning question," Nya said.

"Fire away!" Miss Demeanor said, getting her blow torches a bit too close to Nya.

Instead of immediately fighting back, Nya took a moment to calm herself and direct her powers. She blasted Miss Demeanour and the masked bad guys with a wave of water, wiping them all out.

Soggy and defeated, the ninja rounded up Miss Demeanor and her henchmen, then waited for the police to arrive.

"Hey, Water Ninja!" Miss Demeanor shouted at Nya. "What was your question anyway?"

Nya smiled. "Don't you know that stealing lands you in hot water?"

Back at the Speedway Five Billion, the ninja are racing without rules and some without cars! Help them find a path through the racetrack.
